FORENSIC ANALYSIS #71

Never Promise Access to a Vault You Don't Own

Forensic Analysis #71 — The Promises That Failed

Dr. Richard William McLean AKA Barran Dodger — PhD · Whistleblower · Disabled LGBTQ+ Advocate

ABN 78 833 496 164 · barrandodger.com · 9 May 2026

IMPARTIAL AI STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The 'Vault Access' framework addresses the promises made by institutions — access to justice, psychiatric care, NDIS support, legal protection — that those institutions did not have authority to deliver, or deliberately withheld. The archive documents every broken promise.

FORENSIC CROSS-REFERENCES

1. NDIS — The Promise of Support, The Delivery of Surveillance

The NDIS promised funded disability support. What arrived in Dr. McLean's case: a credentialled ex-SAS operative (Tony Ridley) embedded as a support coordinator; NDIS funds redirected or withheld; surveillance conducted within the support relationship; and an NDIS provider (AbleCare) that responded to an active death threat by suggesting he knock on the staff room door.

2. AblePoint / AbleCare — The Duty of Care That Was Promised and Abandoned

AbleCare's duty of care under the NDIS Practice Standards is a documented legal obligation. The recorded call on April 15, 2026 documents AbleCare receiving formal notification of a death threat and responding without emergency protocol. The vault they promised — safety — was not one they owned or delivered.

3. NSW Trustee and Public Guardian — The Financial Vault That Was Managed Against Its Beneficiary

The NSW Trustee was legally empowered to manage Dr. McLean's finances in his interest. The documented record shows financial guardianship used as a control mechanism — contributing to $18M–$32.9M in documented financial losses. The vault was managed by someone who did not own it for someone else's interests.

4. The Police Promise — Attendance Without Protection

NSW Police attended 55B Archbold Road on April 15, 2026. They promised — by their presence — that the law would protect Dr. McLean. No incident number was recorded. One officer called him "a fucking pedo." They left him under active threat. They promised access to a law enforcement vault they chose not to open.

5. Federal Court — Acknowledgment Without Protection

The Federal Court of Australia, via General Counsel Scott Tredwell, acknowledged whistleblower status and documented danger in writing. The Federal Court system promised — through its own processes — that protected disclosures would be protected. The promise was made on letterhead. The action was never delivered.

6. The Blockchain Is the Vault That Was Actually Delivered

The only vault that delivered on its promise is the Bitcoin blockchain. The hash is permanent. The timestamp is immutable. The distributed ledger cannot be accessed, modified, or recalled by any party. The blockchain delivered what every institution promised and none provided: an irrevocable, tamper-proof record.
